Mister Black

Miguel Pang

Have we ever seen a vampire that loves pink?

Mister Black is a vampire. He lives on an island, surrounded by all kind of monsters: ogres, witches and other terrifying creatures. Obviously, on the island, fashion is for dark colours, but Mr. Black's tragedy is that, secretly, he ADORES pink. Walking down the street, he is unnoticed, but at home, he slips into his comfortable fuchsia dressing gown, his pink poof-ball slippers, enjoys marshmallows and basks in his all-so pink sofa. Everything falls apart the day Mr. Black treats himself to a marvelous pink convertible...

From A Little Green Seed

Mathias Friman

An exploration of the vegetable kingdom through the life of a little seed that becomes a tree.

At first, I was a seed, a tiny little green seed... Swallowed by a bird, the little seed takes off, travels, and is then wrapped up in a little white package, ending up sown. The forest welcomes and protects it, and the little seed becomes a stem, a plantlet... and grows. The life of a seed, which as time and seasons pass, changes names from plant to shrub, and, finally, to tree. All around it, nature follows its course, the sun and the storms, the forest animals, the old slanted tree on which a new sprout is born again.

Greek Mythology Heroes

Martine Laffon & Martin Jarrie

A huge picture book about episodes of the life of six timeless mythology heroes.

What pushes Heracles to perform the impossible tasks king Eurystheus has given him? Why does Ulysses roam so long before joining Ithaca? Martine Laffon, expert in mythology and cosmogony, tells us of the tales of the prowess of Theseus, Heracles, Œdipus, Perseus, Jason and Ulysses. Concisely, the philosopher explains the psychology of the characters and enlightens us on their motives. Thus, half-gods and exceptional men lose part of their mystery so we become all the more attached to them.

Olive & Léandre

Alex Cousseau & Janik Coat

A bear and an octopus are looking for each other in the ocean's vastness. Everything opposes them, and though...

Léandre is a bear living far up North. Olive is an octopus that lives all the way down South... Perhaps between the North and the South, somewhere in the middle, they can find space together.

This is a very classic love story (with love letters, and everything opposing the lovers, etc.) but with fantasy added in. And yes, a bear and an octopus can live together, whatever ethologists or oceanologists may say.

An Awesome Cow-Boy Story

Delphine Perret

Delphine Perret is in charge of a schizophrenic little book mocking the politically correct and playing with story-telling. It is absolutely irresistible and hilarious.

"It's the story of a cow-boy. I replaced him with a monkey because I was told that cowboys are too scary." This is how this awesome cowboy story begins...

On the left page: large text telling stories of an unwieldy cowboy that eats baby rabbits, swears and robs banks. So, how can one illustrate such unbridled violence? Delphine Perret rewrites the story on the right page, giving life to a monkey that brushes his teeth while enjoying aerobics. This creates an absolutely hilarious text-image relationship for this explosive book.
